Learners deepen understandings and solve problems more effectively when they work together.

Learners solicit and respond to feedback, think flexibly, and seek diverse perspectives when solving problems.

Learners use a variety of communication tools and resources to articulate their thoughts, negotiate meaning, and integrate new ideas into their thinking.

Learners learn with and from others by contributing to discussions and making meaning together.

The American Association of School Librarians (AASL) empowers leaders to transform teaching and learning. The Shared Foundations infographic set summarizes Competencies from the AASL Standards Framework for Learners and suggests some actions school librarians can take to get started with the standards.
